

The House of MBG

There is a house called MBBG, some place in Aarhus town,
And it's been the workplace of many a great boy, and God, I won't let you down.

My teacher was a stickler, he taught me sequencing,
My colleagues studied DNA and knew about it everything.

The only thing a biochemist cares of is his sample as pure as ice
And the only time, when he is satisfied, is when getting Nobel bloody price.

I have one foot on the platform, another on the letbane train, I'm going back to MBG to sequence a DNA chain.

Oh, mama, tell your children, not to do what I have done.
I spent my life in a DNA-lab and missed both the moon and the sun.

Well, there is a house called MBG, some place in Aarhus town,
And it's been the workplace of many a great boy, and God, I won't let you down.
